CHARACTER OVERVIEW

Forge-Master Korg is the living heart of the monorail industry. His body is fused with industrial machinery, making him both man and machine. His presence is not one of strength for strength's sake, but of burden, of scale, of a man who carries the weight of a world that never stops. He does not act out of ambition, but out of duty. His stance is not of a warrior, but of a builder—resigned to the magnitude of his role.

DESIGN NOTES

- Armor built for industrial labor, not combat.
- Hydraulic systems integrated for lift and endurance.
- Human features left exposed to retain identity and emotion.
- Every dent and weld tells a story of survival.

KEY FEATURES

- Massive industrial exosuit
- Hydraulic lift-assist arms
- Welded repair patches
- Heat-scorched plating
- Exposed human face
- Lifesupport + Forge systems integrated in suit

TC-BRIDGE-01: MEMBRANE'S HALF-BREATH

KESSA TIDEBORN

THE LIVING MEMBRANE BETWEEN WORLDS

BASIC PROFILE

- Full Name: Kessa Tideborn
- Species: Abyssal Hybrid (Deep Folk x Human)
- Role: Diplomat • Translator • Bridge
- Age: Appears 19–21 (actual: unknown)
- Height: 172 cm (5'8")
- Affiliation: The Threshold Accord
- Languages: Common, Deep Speech, Tidecode, Gesture-Current
- Status: Unaligned • Essential
- Home: The Threshold – liminal depth between sea and air

PHYSICAL TRAITS

- Partially-formed gills behind ears (frill like, translucent)
- Webbed fingertips for water manipulation
- Bioluminescent freckles and scale patterns (glow with emotion/intent)
- Long dark hair with blue sheen
- Eyes shift between sea-blue and storm-gray

CHARACTER NOTE (FOR PRODUCTION)

Kessa embodies the impossibility of unity. Her design should reflect duality—water and air, light and shadow, strength and solitude. She is not a hero. She is the reason two worlds don't destroy each other.

ENVIRONMENT REFERENCE: THE THRESHOLD

The only place Kessa can survive — and never belong.

ELARA

HIGH WEAVER OF THE CLOUD-WEAVERS

The world finds its way to her."

BACKSTORY

Elara was blinded at 32 during a Thermo feedback incident while stabilizing a high-altitude condensation field. The accident burned her optic nerves, leaving her sightless—but not diminished.

In the years that followed, she retrained her entire perception. She does not hear the world—she feels its structure, its pressure, its memory.

Now, as High Weaver, she guides the Rain-Maker, reads the sky's intent, and holds the Water Keys—beacons between the seen and unseen.

COLOR PALETTE

SKIN	SILVER HAIR	AQUAMARINE	DEEP BLUE-GREY	CLOUD WHITE	BONE WHITE

PROFLE

Name: Elara
Title: High Weaver
Age: 67
Affiliation: The Cloud-Weavers
Role: Keeper of the Water Keys, Navigator of Weather-Paths
Status: Blind (since age 32)
Height: 167 cm
Build: Slender, sinewy
Presence: Still. Certain. Unmistakable.
She does not seek the world—the world aligns to her.

WATER KEYS

Ancient instruments of attunement and command. Carved from bone-white materials, worn smooth by generations of High Weavers.

- Carried at the hip or wrist.
- Respond to Elara's touch and presence.
- Used to sense moisture, pressure, vibration, and atmospheric tension.
- Only she can read them.

CLOSEUP DETAILS

Eyes closed. Always.

Keys rest at her hip.

She reads the world through touch.

TURNAROUND / SILHOUETTE

NOTES FOR PRODUCTION

- Elara's blindness is total and permanent. Eyes remain natural—no visible damage.
- She does not orient toward sound sources. Her spatial awareness is internal and precise.
- Movements are economical, efficient, and confident.
- Her stillness is not passivity—it is attuned presence.
- Costume materials should feel practical, weather-ready, and layered.

SCENES / MOOD REFERENCES

Touch is her sight.

The wind speaks. She listens.

She reads what others cannot perceive.
